My husband and I have a great marriage, but kids cause the marriage to be on the back burner. I didn't give our union the attention it deserved. This challenge caused me to reevaluate how I looked at our relationship. It rekindled our love and was not full of cliche answers to hard questions. It causes you to take a long hard look at yourself and how you love your husband. Life changing. Best money you'll spend on your marriage and much cheaper than couples therapy ;)

There are a lot of marriage books out there, but for me Love Unending was perfect. It was practical and applicable for busy moms but will also suit mom's in all walks of life. It was a reminder for both of us to SEE each other in the midst of the craziness that we are EXISTING in. It is also something that can be repeated time and again. We naturally fall back into the same old habits, but with five minutes each evening I'm able to re-center myself and therefore my marriage. Whether you think you need it or not, I highly recommend this book!

This book is wonderful! It is amazing how much the simple daily challenges can reset your heart and your relationship. I did not tell my husband what the challenges were, but he definitely noticed that overall we were touching more, laughing more, and communicating better. It feels so good to make the first move towards closing the distance that crept in after the birth of our toddler. You will be so glad that you purchased Love Unending!

This book has been so refreshing for our marriage! Becky's writing is genuine, real, and encouraging for a mother's heart while trying to navigate life as a wife and mother. Each day's challenge is attainable and helps build upon your marriage and meets you right where you are. I highly recommend this book for any mom who wants to work on their marriage and bring back that head over heels love you had the day you married your spouse.

This book is fun, its practical, it's hard work, its REAL!!! Every mom/wife needs to read this. It's a quick 21 day challenge that will change YOU and your marriage. Becky is so real, so raw, so honest. You'll want all of her books!!!

This book is a powerful tool for any wife who is also a momma! (Honestly it's good for any married woman, but Becky targets it to moms.) It's a 21 day challenge for married moms to rediscover the passion, servant's heart and prayerful attitude that we had early on in our marriages (or even relationship before marriage). These challenges have made me examine my heart in a new way and has begun a new heart attitude in me. I'm thankful to be able to build a strong foundation on my marriage (even 5 years in) to stand on for years and decades to come.

I heard the author doing an interview on the radio, and I got this for my wife because it sounded like the book speaks to a lot of the exact challenges she's experiencing. After reading it, I found it really does discuss a lot of important issues to men, but as a guide, it's mostly focused on challenging yourself to act certain ways and do certain things. I think there's certainly a place for acting first and letting your emotions follow later, but I feel the book could have been improved by spending at least a little bit more time helping women address their underlying emotional issues as well. That being said, the book is still very worthy of 5 stars.

Becky's book is in an easy-to-read format with helpful personal stories and challenges throughout. But make no mistake, this book isn't fluff, and the principles and exercises , can have a deep and lasting impact on your marriage. Some of the days seem like such a simple thing but when combined with purposeful, day by day intentional acts of changing our own behaviors with in our marriage, I can already see our hearts changing towards each other. Becky's writing is like sitting and having coffee with another girlfriend, you will feel comfortable hearing her stories and you'll want to grab another friend to join you and help keep you accountable as well. So grab this book for yourself and an extra for a friend and challenge each other to grow and be intentional in your marriages while walking through some of the most challenging seasons in our parenting lives. You'll be glad you made the extra time.
