Voices From The Ming-Qing Cataclysm: China In Tigers' Jaws

Synopsis

This fascinating book presents eyewitness accounts of a turbulent period in Chinese history: the fall of the Ming dynasty and the conquest of China by the Manchus in the mid-seventeenth century. Lynn A. Struve has translated, introduced, and annotated absorbing testimonies from a wide range of individuals in different social stations—Chinese and Europeans, missionaries and viceroys, artists and merchants, Ming loyalists and Qing collaborators, maidservants and eunuchs—all telling stories of hardship and challenge in the midst of cataclysmic change. This fascinating volume . . . can be readily used in any college course on late imperial Chinese history for wonderful examples of the personal experiences of the Chinese people living through the fall of the Ming dynasty to their Manchu conquerors." —Benjamin A. Elman, China Review International "The scholarship behind this work is impeccable. . . . ## Customer Reviews

I mainly ordered this book for the memoir in it called the Massacre at Yangzhou. I believe these 17th century texts from China have never been translated into English before, and Lynn Struve is a known specialist in this field. She has done an incredible job. If you're interested in history, Chinese history, traditional China, war accounts, memoir, all these are excellent reasons to get a copy of this book.

This book has the great advantage of giving the reader the direct speech of people who lived the events described, i.e., the rise of the Qing dynasty and the fall of the Ming. In this sense is quite a unique document, with great value for the historian, but also for those who need to understand closely the way of thinking and feeling in a certain historical time. Through the book one can experience the fear and terror of an invasion and the arrival of new masters. But also to admire how the Qing had the ability to preserve and absorb the Han culture. If the editor reads this small review I would like to ask him if he can contact me. E-mail: cmj99@hotmail.com
