The Dooky Chase Restaurant is a New Orleans landmark, famous for Chase's down-home Creole cooking. She offers her favorite recipes here, from Crab Soup and Crawfish Etouffee to Squirrel Pie and Stewed Snapper Turtle, and includes lively reminiscences of her childhood and restaurant experiences. Many of the recipes, however, are available in other regional cookbooks; for larger and area collections. Copyright 1990 Reed Business Information, Inc.

LEAH CHASE is a recipient of the Southern Foodways Alliance's Lifetime Achievement Award. The Southern Food and Beverage Museum created the Leah Chase Louisiana Gallery in her honor.

It's a great book with accurate recipes for really simple and tasty Louisiana food. If you like adding corn syrup, pectin and all sort of artificially-processed "crap" in your dishes, this is not the book for you!

A Southern cooking classic.

The legend! Sit down and learn a few things about real cooking. So fun. And delicious!

Classic. Creole. Recipes

Easy to read. Looking forward to making these recipes with a few exceptions. Not sure if I'll make the squirrel meals, however, husband likes squirrel and ate them as a child.

Very good cook book.

I read this as the classic I hold it to be. It reads as a historic reflection on events and people and the dinner gatherings that brought them together. It touches on the life experiences that inspired the creative dishes served by Mrs. Chase. Great combination. Thank you.

I thought this was a great book for my heritage and maybe try a few dished from the book. Well I found out its more fun to read and see how women cooked "back in the day" then it is to actually cook a dish from this book. Where would I get squirrels for squirrel pie anyways? Fun book to have in the book case.
