Freedom's Answer: When The Twin Towers Fell, The Next Generation Rose!

Synopsis

Freedom's Answer is the story of what teens from across the country accomplished though they were too young to vote and had none of the money that funds the rest of politics. This book chronicles how students of all nationalities, religions and political persuasions breathed life into a vision, made it real, and now it calls readers to action, asking them to expand the dream.

This book presents a compelling story of over 2000 young people who came together to spread a message of peace during violent, turbulent times. What started with a small handful of high school students spread, in a matter of weeks, to over 2,000 young people ranging from grade school, middle school, high school, and college age. In the face of media misinformation and national outrage, these students bonded together and tried to focus on common goals, and to explore ways to go about global peace as a way to end war and terrorism. There are 5 main chapters, each presenting a unique story, documenting some fascinating ways in which young people stood up for their country and affected real change in their communities and in the media. This short book is an easy read (12 and up), and is a great case study for a book report, or would even make good curriculum for a variety of subjects including social studies, government, civics, debate, peace studies, etc.

I received this book when I heard one of the program founders speak about the program that five students along with two adults helped to found. After I read the book, I was deeply moved by the things that teenagers like me went out and did in 2002. They shattered the voter turnout record for a non-Presidential election. This time I wanted to be apart of it. This is the ultimate story of how teens aren't the pessimistic, drug and alcoholic abusing, non-caring individuals that the media portrays us to be. No way! This is us going out and showing that we do care, and most of us won't be able to vote in the upcoming election. Freedom's Answer is a non-partisan program that motivates high school students as well as college students to go out register people to vote, asks them to pledge their vote, and doesn't do it for a party or individual, but simply because they want people to exercise their right as an American since that freedom has been defended by our servicemen and women. If you want to see more about the program, the website is: [...] If you want the accounts of students around the nation too young to vote, but old enough to lead, then this is the book for you. It will truly change the way you look at the generation that is defined by a Tuesday morning of tragedy. It will show you that in the midst of chaos, teens could join forces from different sects to unite under the country that has given them so much. No more partisan politics or dirty campaigns... teens are leading the campaign of unity and patriotism within this country. Terrorism attacked democracy on 9/11, but in November of 2004, as students did in 2002, you will hear Freedom's Answer.
