Health In The Later Years

Synopsis

Health in the Later Years is designed for college students, both undergraduate and graduate, in diverse fields of study, particularly those planning a career in health and human services. The text provides a comprehensive, scientific approach to health related topics affecting elders and those who care for them. Included are chapters that address the major influences on the health of older persons: demography, chronic and acute illnesses, mental health and disorders, medication use, physical activity and nutrition, sexuality, health promotion, medical and long term care, and death and dying, among others. The text takes a "whole person" approach to health including ample attention to cultural differences, psycho-social, economic, and cohort differences.

Rebecca Ferrini, MD, MPH is the Medical Director of Edgemoor, a 170-bed long-term care facility for the indigent run by the County of San Diego in Santee, California. Her duties include both administrative responsibilities and clinical care.. Dr. Ferrini received her M.D. from the University of California at San Diego in 1991 and her Masters in Public Health in Maternal and Child Health in 1995. She completed a General Preventive Medicine Residency at California State University, San Diego/University of California San Diego Joint Residency Program. She has Board Certifications in Hospice and Palliative Medicine and General Preventive Medicine and is a certified nursing home medical director from the American Medical Directors Association. She has published extensively in the areas of medical practice guidelines and policy-making, as well as education, pain control and epidemiology. Armeda Ferrini, Ph.D., professor and chair of the Department of Health and Community Services at California State University at Chico, received her M.S. in Family and Child Development at Kansas State University and her Ph.D. in Health Science at the University of Utah. She has been teaching the course, Health in the Later Years, for more than 25 years.

Am I the only one who's noticing a lot of typos and information that contradicts other information that was presented previously? I'm not sure I know what "homocide" is, or which population is the least educated because it's either Hispanic Americans or Native Americans according to the book. Some sentences are even missing subjects or verbs. It's an easy read, sure, and it gives you a general overview of the aging population. I'm just bummed I have to decipher some of the more specific facts through bad editing. Bought this for a university course. Not sure this is one I would keep to cite later.

Rented for way too much money for the quality of the book. I needed it for class but very disappointed at how much it cost to rent a beat up paperback.

I am thoroughly enjoying this class, as so much of it is relevant either to my aging parents, both in a nursing home, or my disabled husband, who has MS. Learning many things, and the book is well-written and not a long boring tedious text. Divided into fairly short pieces that I am easily able to understand (not a bunch of long words that I have to look up). Great book, great class, great format!

The book is used with a lot of marker inside, but still good. Thank for your book.

Not very up-to-date. Could have done with some better reports figures about health and 'minority' populations of how cultures used to be healthy before a western lifestyle and diet.

Great book

Lots of information provided, and very helpful in my study of gerontology. Information also up-to-date, with good medical background information provided, where appropriate, for the topics covered. Only criticism is book is very heavy on content, almost too much so.

Its a college book, this one was used and had markings on the inside. Not a huge deal but a tad distracting.
